

If I Believe

If I believe that Jesus was God, I can believe that God stepped in to change my life and change our world.
The cosmic power that made the stars dropped in to say “Hi! Let’s be friends.”
So when I doubt that I have got the power to change, I can trust that God’s power is available,
can change me
and others.

If I believe that Jesus was a real human being,
with flesh and blood,
with sweat and pimples,
with parents and teachers, I know that he knows what I’m going through.
If he could get it together,
I can believe that I can too.
If he was really real,
then his example is real,
and he can show me what’s worth doing and what’s worth forgetting, what’s worth hoping for and worth giving up, and who I can be.

If I believe that God chose to die on a Cross, I can believe God would do anything to help me find out how great life can be.
I can believe that God’s love is so awesome that nothing will stop God from loving me – nothing that I have done, nothing that anyone has done to me, nothing that I will ever do.
Nothing will stop God from loving me.
Cool!
