local community as an expression of the mission of God

Culture-Making as Mission

with Rev Dr Steve Taylor

Uniting College for Leadership & Theology

Steve Taylor is the Senior Minister at Opawa Baptist Church in Christchurch, New Zealand and lectures with Laidlaw College and Fuller Seminary. Steve's current ministry has involved transforming a traditional congregation by enabling change at the core and the fringes. Previously Steve planted and pastored a church in the Auckland area. He is the author of "The Out of Bounds Church" and the forthcoming "Missional Reader." Steve was a Visiting Lecturer in Missional Leadership with Parkin-Wesley College in 2008.

This day seminar focuses on ways in which Christians can be proactive in mission as they live intentionally as disciples of Jesus Christ in their local communities. Rather than simply conforming to the culture around us, we can be creators of alternative ways of living that invite people to experience the grace of God through everyday practices of faith.

This day seminar will explore:

1. Understandings of culture and a theology of culture-making
2. Culture-making for hospitality - links between food and faith, relationships and soul
3. Culture-making for discipleship - how our behaviour and lifestyle reflects Christian teaching, how we embody Scripture and faith practices
4. Culture-making for mission - learnings from Steve's church at Opawa and possibilities for your own

This day is designed for congregational teams. You will benefit most if you bring a group, as you will be working together throughout the day. However, individual participants are also welcome.
